The Way We Live Now is a satirical novel by Anthony Trollope, published in London in 1875 after first appearing in serialised form. It is one of the last significant Victorian novels to have been published in monthly parts. The novel is Trollope's longest, comprising 100 chapters, and is particularly rich in sub-plot.

"The Way We Live Now" was a four-part (5-hour-long) BBC television series (from 2001) of the Anthony Trollope novel of the same name (from 1875). Trollope writes about complex human situations that are mature and timeless. He is one of my favorite writers. I read the novel immediately prior to watching the series.

The Way We Live Now is one of the finest of over forty novels that Anthony Trollope wrote in his long and productive career. What makes this novel truly great is Trollope's ability to involve the reader in a lengthy and complicated story. Few other writers have Trollope's skill in creating a world that seems as true as our own.
